18. 다음 글에서 밑줄 친 This crop이 가리키는 것으로 가장 적절한 것은?

This crop grows up to about a meter high and looks a bit like grass. The seeds are planted in specially prepared ground, and when they are about 25 days old they are transplanted into a field which has little earth walls around the outside. The field is filled with water, and the young plant is planted about ten centimeters under the surface. It produces little grains which can be eaten. This plant was first grown in India five thousand years ago and today provides the basic food for half of the world, including India, Indonesia, Korea, Japan, and China.

① rice ② bean ③ corn ④ potato ⑤ wheat

19. 밑줄 친 practice의 의미에 가장 가까운 것은?

These days doctors get most of their payments from the government and insurance companies, not from patients, as they did in the past. To be paid, doctors must fill out numerous forms to justify their fees. Such paperwork often proves too burdensome for doctors to handle. Because of this, most doctors are salaried employees. And more important, starting a private practice is too costly for most young doctors whose medical training has left them deeply in debt.

① habit ② business ③ advertisement
④ research ⑤ lesson

[21～24] 다음 글을 읽고, 빈칸에 가장 적절한 것을 고르시오.

21. When Achilles was born, he was fated to die on the battlefield at a young age. Hearing this, his mother held him by the right ankle and washed him in the River Styx to give him immortality. A person washed in this river is protected from all wounds. Later, he fought in the Trojan War. His mother told Achilles that he would need to be careful of his right heel since it didn't touch the river water. During the war, Achilles won all the battles. But when he was hit on the right heel by a poisoned arrow, Achilles died. Now, an "Achilles' heel" means someone's _____.

* immortality 불멸

① attractive part ② family background
③ special weak point ④ aggressive behavior
⑤ psychological problem

22. One major difference between living in the city and in the country is _____ . In large cities, we often hear of people living in huge apartment buildings with hundreds of strangers. These urban apartment dwellers tend to be wary of unknown faces and rarely get to know their neighbors well. The situation in a small town is often just the opposite. Small-town people generally grow up together, attend the same schools and churches, and share the same friends. As a result, rural people are much more likely to treat their neighbors like family and invite them into their homes.

* wary 경계하는

① the cost of living
② the rate of crimes
③ the amount of pollution
④ the degree of friendliness
⑤ the range of leisure activities

23. Most people who have trouble with schoolwork don't lack intelligence — instead, they are failed by their own stance toward the work. There's the "I can't do it" syndrome. Instead of making an effort to do the work, the "I can't do it" type gives up before he or she begins. This type often also has trouble on the job. Then there's the "I'm too tired" excuse. Students with this problem give in to the temptation to nap whenever there is work to be done. Another common excuse for low achievement is, "The instructor is boring." These students want every course to be highly entertaining. In short, most students' failure in schoolwork comes from .

① parents' high expectations
② their having too many friends
③ too much stress about grades
④ their attitude toward studying
⑤ their poor management of time

24. Clearly, our clothes influence . In a study of two groups of people, one group was well-dressed, and the other was poorly dressed. The people in both groups were asked to leave a quarter in a public phone booth. Then, after someone else went into the booth and started to make a call, they were to ask that person whether he or she had found a quarter there. The study found that subjects returned the quarter to the well-dressed people in most cases. On the other hand, the poorly dressed people got their money back only half of the time.

① how we feel ② how people react to us
③ how we should behave ④ where we could go
⑤ what kind of shoes we wear

25. 다음 글에서 "I"의 심경 변화를 가장 잘 나타낸 것은?

We were supposed to have a group blind date. It was 5:30 in a coffee shop in front of the university. All four of us were wondering what the girls would be like. About ten minutes later, four girls came in. Then the awkward time began. We asked some questions and so did they. I found my dream girl sitting in the corner, but I didn't have the courage to speak to her. I was afraid that she didn't like me. After twenty minutes, it was time to choose our partners. We had to decide, at the count of three, which partner we would like to have. If a boy and a girl should point at each other, they would become partners. One, two, three! Surprisingly, my dream girl was also pointing at me! I was beside myself.

⑤ proud → disappointed

26. 다음 글의 분위기로 가장 적절한 것은?

On the first Sunday, worshippers wept, sang and heard words of hope from pastors, who tried to explain the inexplicable. At the packed church, mourners listened as a pastor read a poem written by Chuck and Wen Hadley, in memory of their 14-year-old daughter. Residents lined streets, turning the city's annual Christmas parade into a mournful event for the victims. The Heath High School band marched in silence, each musician holding a single white rose in place of an instrument, accompanied only by the beat of a single drum.

* inexplicable 설명할 수 없는

32. 밑줄 친 barista에 관한 설명 중, 다음 글의 내용과 일치하지 않는 것은?

A barista is a skillful person who makes coffee. In Italy, barista means "bartender" but the title also refers to a specialty coffee maker. Because the cafe owners know a skillful barista will gather more and more customers, they are willing to pay more money to hire such a person and not to make him leave. A good barista is said to get a big salary. Although the status of the job is not considered as one in upper classes, even noble persons at parties try to hear from the barista about the details of making a great coffee. So many people take courses to become baristas.

[33~34] 다음 글의 주제로 가장 적절한 것을 고르시오.

33. In the past, people ate three meals a day. But now, the fast pace of life in modern society does not leave enough time for people to eat three full meals. It is not just the fast pace of life that has affected modern eating habits. Modern technology also has something to do with it. For example, look at cars. They became popular and then fast food was invented so that people could eat in their cars. Computers have also changed modern eating habits. Teenagers don't want to take time away from surfing or playing games, so they snack in front of their computers.

34. Consumer goods usually pass from manufacturers to wholesalers to retailers. The manufacturer makes the product and decides on an initial price. Then the manufacturer sells the item to a wholesaler, who sells the item to a retailer at a new price. The retailer then tries to sell the product to the consumer at yet another price. At every level in the chain, the price of the product is increased enough for that member to make a profit. Thus the consumer price of a product is often the result of several separate decisions and no one has total control.

① why consumption is needed
② how the consumer price is set
③ the shortage of consumer goods
④ how the price affects consumption
⑤ ways of becoming a wise consumer

When my two daughters were growing up, we had a maid, but I gave the maid clear instructions that the girls had to dress themselves and clean up their rooms themselves. My colleagues and relatives used to accuse me of being too harsh with the children and asked why I had a maid. By asking my children to do their own chores, I wanted them to become self-sufficient and not handicapped by depending on others. We must treat children as children, nurturing them with love and care. But we should also discipline them to become useful and responsible individuals.

On TV advertisements, over sixty percent of all the characters are male. Although female characters are less likely to be in advertisements targeted at men, male characters even feature in advertisements aimed at women. Is it a kind of sexism? In fact, it is because of gender differences in reactions to advertisements. Males will not use products regarded as "feminine," while women are more likely to use those products normally classed as "male." When children are playing, boys are unwilling to play with female-type toys whereas girls have no objection to playing with toys generally regarded as "male." Surely advertising companies take these attitudes into account when creating their advertisements.

Researchers studied cookbooks from 36 countries to learn how often the traditional recipes called for spices. They learned that more spices were used in the hot countries. Mexican cooks use hot pepper. Researchers also found that people in colder countries use very few of the spices. Canadian cooks don't use hot pepper very often. What makes that difference? Researchers think it is because spice plants contain some important chemicals. These chemicals can kill bacteria in food. The bacteria grow more easily and spoil food more quickly at higher temperatures.

41. 다음 글에서 서울의 새로운 버스 제도에 관하여 필자가 주장하는 바로 가장 적절한 것은? [1점]

I am writing to you to draw your attention to an urgent need for all foreigners in Korea. The new Seoul bus system is very complicated, and there is not enough information available in English or any other foreign languages. I called several tourist offices in Seoul, but I was only told that they don't have English guidebooks about the new bus system. Please remember that almost all foreign guidebooks on Korea are out of date and foreigners here will not be able to understand the new bus system. I am hoping that this inconvenience will be solved soon.

Gary left the military after twenty years of service as a marine pilot. His military friends were surprised that he would leave with the possibility of promotion dangling in front of him. How could he do this? What was wrong with him? His friends didn't quite say this to him, but that is what they wanted to know. Gary had an answer. "Holding the highest rank has never been my dream," he said. "It might be your dream, and that's fine, but it isn't mine." Gary's dream was to serve his country by serving children. He offered his services to the local school district, and in only a few years was asked to run a new high school academic program. Learning, according to Gary, is a lot like flying. "You have your hands on the controls. You have the power to excel. It's all in your hands." Teaching is, for him, a dream that has come true. It could never have come true if Gary had worried about what other people thought he should do.

Frank loves photography and devotes his spare time to it. He photographs friends' weddings. He wins some local amateur competitions. Gradually, he gets more and more work. Within a couple of years he's making more money on weekends than at the office. Sure, some weddings get cancelled, some clients don't pay their bills, and he has some lean months, but for Frank, it's all worth it. Now he's planning to become a full-time photographer in the near future.

Maria loves languages. She speaks Italian and English and decides to learn Spanish. She vacations in Barcelona. To improve her Spanish, she teaches English to South American immigrants after work — for free. Within two years, she's fluent in three languages. Maria applies for three travel jobs and misses out. But she doesn't quit. She does a translator's course to refine her skills. Finally, she gets a position in a language school.

Jim loves hiking and camping. He has all the gear: boots, tents, rucksacks, etc. He notices that some people want to camp, but they have no gear. Now he organizes their whole camping trip, takes the people in his van — and charges them. Sometimes campers lose his gear, but Jim reasons: "No job is perfect — it's better than my last job at the grocery!"

(A)

On the other hand, those in polychronic cultures, such as Latin and Arab countries, tend to do many things at once. They value flexibility over punctuality and tend to change plans often and easily. They are controlled by human relationships more than their schedules.

(B)

Edward T. Hall, a famous sociologist, found that there are cultural differences in perceiving time. He distinguished between two types of cultures — monochronic and polychronic. People of monochronic cultures, such as northern Europeans and Anglo North Americans, tend to do one thing at a time. They value speed and punctuality. They are efficient and focused. They are controlled by their schedules.

(C)

Have you ever had trouble working with others because of their approach to time? Some people are prompt in completing their part of a project, while others are slow. Some people are on time for meetings, while others are late. Some people focus on getting the task done in time, while others spend time chatting and making sure everyone is feeling comfortable. Why are we different in the ways we approach time?

said, "You should be ashamed of yourself touching him like that." I was so embarrassed I couldn't even reply. Who came up with the concept that boys hit a certain age and suddenly don't need to be hugged? It probably traces from a mixture of misinformed fears, including the fear of doing psychological damage by preventing his individuation process. Whatever the source, it is high time it got put to rest.

Caring physical touch is (b) one of the most powerful and undeniable ways to give and receive real warmth and love. And it helps us to feel that we are indeed deeply connected to the ones we love. Withholding (c) that incredible gift for any reason can be a disaster. No matter what we say about loving our son, it sends a message to him that he is now literally isolated, outside the deeper circle of our love and caring. Therefore, I try to raise my son to be more emotionally grounded and I try to have a better understanding and full access to his emotions. I also try to do everything possible to keep him connected to me so he can feel and share the deepest aspects of my love.

Hug your boys and don't ever stop. Because of (d) the cultural legacy that surrounds them, there will be times when they might resist, pull away, or feel embarrassed. Understand and respect their feelings, but don't let it stop you from maintaining (e) a regular caring physical bond.

48. 위 글에서 필자가 주장하는 바로 가장 적절한 것은?

① Learn through others' mistakes.
② Try to schedule family activities together.
③ Help your boy learn to handle his feelings.
④ Teach your boy to take responsibility for his acting.
⑤ Don't stop making physical contact with your boy.
